

Issue #17, November 6, 2014

Project Partners are in the Building!

It is finally feeling like fall in Fort Worth with cooler weather, light jackets and the holidays fast approaching. As the season changes, the West Center is looking ahead to the upcoming reconstruction! This week, you've most likely seen some new faces around the Center. These are our project partners learning what we do and how we do it.

The partners selected for this project have an impressive understanding of the details required to work with a vulnerable population and have been hard at work this week inspecting our safety cameras and fire alarm systems. In the weeks ahead, you will be invited to attend events to introduce you to the people who will be responsible for the West Center transformation. During these meetings, you will be encouraged to ask questions that you may have before the project begins.

Please drop any questions you may have in our Hard Hat Update Box, located across from our chapel, or email your questions to sclayton@jameslwest.org.

Thank you all for your thoughts and prayers over the last few weeks after the passing of my husband. I appreciate each one of you and the kind words that you've so graciously offered.

Best Wishes,

Susan Farris, Executive Director