

Issue #5 July 9, 2014

Safety First!

One of our most frequently-asked questions relates to contractor safety.

Early on, the Center's staff and Board spent a lot of time talking through the many elements of the project related to resident safety and comfort throughout the process. Selecting a general contractor who understood our residents' needs was crucial.

After an extensive preselection process, the top five firms made presentations to our design team, several board members, and key staff. The committee selected Adolphson & Peterson, a nationally-recognized company with a full portfolio including many healthcare and school projects, and an impressive understanding of the details required to work with a vulnerable population. Even in the initial meeting, it was clear that, from background checks to cleanliness to mitigation of the impacts of sound, odor, dust, etc., safety was clearly an embedded part of their company culture.

We plan to host all of you at an event where you can meet our project partners, who will be glad to answer all of your questions. In the meantime, you can learn more about A&P by visiting their website, at www.a-p.com.

Thanks to everyone for your questions—keep them coming!

Susan Farris, Executive Director